ANNE-MAREE KINLEY ANNOUNCED AS CASTLE HILL'S 2018 LOCAL WOMAN OF THE YEAR

In recognition of her dedication and hard work in the local community, Member for Castle Hill Ray Williams has named Mrs Anne-Maree Kinley as Castle Hill's 2018 Local Woman of the Year.

Mr Williams said Mrs Kinley's commitment to bringing positive change to Castle Hill through her dedication of over 21 years to the local schools and community, made her an outstanding candidate.

"Anne-Maree has been a powerhouse within the Castle Hill Public and Castle Hill High Schools P&C's for over two decades. She has not only been an excellent leader in this capacity, but a role model for many of the young women whose lives she has impacted through her involvement" Mr Williams said.

Minister for Women Tanya Davies said the NSW Women of the Year Local Awards celebrate the contributions and successes of women who are often quiet achievers.

"The Local Awards are designed to acknowledge women who are making a significant impact in the places where we live and work, and in the lives of people around them. Local award winners exemplify the spirit of their communities," Mrs Davies said.

Mrs Kinley was invited to attend the 2018 NSW Women of the Year Awards ceremony in Sydney on International Women's Day, Thursday, 8 March with NSW Premier Gladys Berejiklian.

Statewide Award winners, as voted by the public, are announced at the Awards ceremony. To view the full list of Award categories and finalists go to www.women.nsw.gov.au.

The NSW Women of the Year Awards program recognises remarkable women across the state who have achieved inspiring things in their careers, in business or in their communities.
