TICKETS TO SENIORS COMEDY SHOW NOW AVAILABLE

Seniors will be well and truly tested to see if they have heard every joke in the book at next year's Seniors Festival Comedy Show, with a powerhouse line-up set to perform. Tickets are now available to the shows, which will see the likes of Arj Barker, Sam McCool, Clint Paddison and Vince Sorrenti all set to perform.

Member for Castle Hill Ray Williams MP said the 2023 show will see the show performed at its traditional venue of Sydney's Town Hall and for the first time at Port Macquarie's Glasshouse.

"The Seniors Comedy show has been entertaining older people for 9 years as part of the annual NSW Seniors Festival," Mr Williams.

"It is a great event and highly popular, which is why we have added an additional location to help more seniors attend and experience all it has to offer."

Tickets are now available to the Sydney and Port Macquarie shows, which will be held on 8 and 10 February respectively.

Minister for Seniors Mark Coure said the NSW Seniors Festival is the largest event of its kind in the Southern Hemisphere, and has been running for 65 years.

"In addition to the comedy shows, we have the Premier's Gala Concerts and the Seniors Festival Expo, which will feature over 50 different exhibitions, with giveaways, live entertainment and more," Mr Coure said.

"There will also be more than 85 activities hosted during the festival right across the state so there is something for all seniors to get involved in during the festival."
